BRITISH CRUISER IS BLOWN UP BY SUBMARINE; GERMANS HAVE SUNK SIX IN NORTH SEA

H. M. S. Hawke Goes Down With 350 of Her Crew of 400.

ONLY THREE OFFICERS SAVED

Paris Reports that Progress Is Continued and Copenhagen Says Germans Are Rushing 100,000 Troops to Reinforce Army in the West.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, October 16.—The British cruiser Hawke has been sunk in the North Sea by a German submarine. Out of a crew of 400 men about 30 were saved. The admiral has given the following statement:

"H. M. S. Hawke, Captain Hugh Edwardes, was attacked by a submarine in the northern waters of the North Sea yesterday afternoon, but was passed. H. M. S. Hawke, Captain H. P. T. D. Williams, was attacked about the same time and was sunk."

The following officers, with 39 men of the crew, have liability at Arbroath from a thwarted boatswain's mate, Austin, Gunner James Dennis, and Acting Gunner Harry Ewitt. The remaining officers and men are missing. Full details will be published as soon as available.

The Hawke is the British cruiser which collided with the White Star liner Olympic, September 29, 1911, near Osborne Bay, on the north side of the Isle of Wight. She received serious damage. While the Hawke was laid down in June of 1899, she was launched on March 11, 1901.

Among her officers at the time of the collision were eight naval officers. Other British warships lost since the outbreak of hostilities are the cruiser Aboukir, which was sunk in the North Sea by a mine August 27; the cruiser Pathfinder, torpedoed in the North Sea September 19; and the three battle cruisers Aboukir, Hood and Lion.

The Hawke makes a total of 11 British ships destroyed by enemy in the North Sea since the beginning of the war.

CAPTURE OF OSTEND UNPLACED VERY SOON

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 16.—The latest news is that the Germans were unable to take to the harbor of Ostend, having or even to land at the small town on the Belgian coast about 10 miles from the sea. Some of the refugees have come to England and steamer service between there and England has been suspended until further notice. Thousands of Belgians have reached the British Isles in addition to the multitude of neutrals who have fled to England.

The proposal was promptly rejected.

The British press today believed to ease the taking of Ostend with the capture of Antwerp. In other words they consider it taken a great moral blow to the German victory.

Whether this will prove eventful only remains to be seen. The Germans may yet capture it with the seas blinding the Belgian coast if it loses a weapon here.

It is pointed out that the chief success the Germans have attained in the past have been derived from the tactics of envelopment. The channel to be now prevent this and a decisive blow from the Germans, it is argued, can be only after the allied front has been penetrated. The arrival of the Germans near Ostend, however, straightens out their line in Belgium so that it is now more difficult to do so, connecting with their forces in France. Being jammed up to the coast of the north leaves the Germans without a flank anywhere. With no flank to turn it will be necessary for the allies to break the line completely and the force fighting to fight its way to continue along the Belgian frontier.

DOCTORS DISCUSS MEDICAL TEST FOR PUPILS OF SCHOOLS

Meet School Directors at Dinner at the Colonial Inn

TO AVOID PREVIOUS MISTAKES

Admitting Shortcomings of First Inspection and Cognizant of the Many Disadvantages Under Which They Labor, Plans for New Start Made.

Admitting that mistakes were made during the first medical examination of public school pupils last year, and cognizant of the handicaps under which inspectors must labor at all times regardless of the system adopted, approximately 30 physicians of Connellsville met with members of the school board at a dinner given them at the Colonial Inn last night and discussed plans for the resumption of the inspection again this year.

The physicians were practically unanimous in their belief that medical inspection is productive of good results and should be used by all means to be continued. What criticism developed was largely against the methods used last year, and it was agreed that those methods would not be repeated.

"On the firing line the men sleep and obtain shelter in dugouts; they have hollowed or cut under the sides of the trenches. These refugees are placed slightly above the bottom of the trench so as to remain dry. In wet weather, the door of the trench is also closed for purposes of drainage. Some of the trenches are piled with overhead cover which gives protection well for the safety of the inspection as a whole."

It was one of the most interesting conferences ever held. The physicians discussed the matted fully and frankly, heard and noted criticisms of their work last year. Their admission of mistakes, however, was in a spirit that spoke well for the success of the inspection the coming year. The doctors didn't mind the re-use; they received from their own number; rather they seemed to court it because there was a spirit of calmness and absence of speech. Each physician said exactly what he should be thought of in relation to his colleagues.

President F. E. Younkin and Directors C. Roy Hotel, Ralph K. Long and Lloyd J. Shaw were merely interested spectators. Superintendent Ashe was a vigorous defender of medical inspection both last year and for the present term.

There was really constructive criticism, and some of the best suggestions probably came from those rather lukewarm towards the whole project. Dr. W. J. Bailey advised the theory that the teacher should be the one to select the pupils to be examined and that the physician examine them. This was reported physically defective by the teacher. He advised that the teacher be free to determine the child whom he must make that is a physician who makes a hasty and superficial examination. To accomplish this suggestion came another from Dr. Walter N. Goldsmith who asserted that there should be letters for teachers delivered by physicians. He asserted that many teachers are really deficient in the knowledge of children who are physically defective, but that a series of letters by physicians would enable them to perform efficient work along this line. Dr. C. W. Pitts suggested that all examinations be made by the pupil's family physician.

Every physician in attendance had something to say on the subject. The result of the conference was the unanimous adoption of a resolution submitted by Dr. E. B. Eddy, who last year was author of a rather severe criticism of the inspection, demanding that the superintendent of schools, principal of the high school, one school director and one dentist and committee of three physicians to be named from among those willing to serve as inspectors again this year be given authority to fix a standard and method of inspection of pupils.

"Standardize the inspection," was the keynote of the meeting. Every physician claimed that the criticism of the work last year was due to the fact that the physicians undertook the examination of pupils without a standard to go by, and that each followed his individual judgment regardless of the attitude of the others. As a consequence, some physicians reported defects that others did not.

Doctors Bailey and Dr. A. R. Kidd criticized the examination of pupils for eye defects. It is often done that the eyes tested the most difficult of all were usually performed either by a physician entirely unfamiliar with eye trouble or else by Superintendent Ashe or a teacher. Doctor Bailey said that it is almost impossible to ascertain the average publics' corrected vision under circumstances attending the inspection. He also said that a child's vision might be defective, yet that vision would be normal for it.

Critics of the inspection were in the minority and virtually every physician present asserted that with a standard to go by, the inspection this year would not only be of great benefit to the pupils, but would correct the faults of the first tests.

Although the dinner was to be at 5 o'clock, it was nearly 6 before all of the physicians arrived. They were treated to a spring chicken dinner. The dinner was excellent and the service above par. After having swept the plates clean, the clearers were passed around, the dishes were opened by President F. E. Younkin, who announced that since his unexpected resignation as president of the school board, he held only the position of toastmaster. He then began calling on the physicians for

"PHANTOMS" IN FIRST WARD ARE ALL OLD TIMERS

Nineteen of the Men Challenged by Democrats Voted in 1909.

ALL OF THEM ARE RESIDENTS

Voters Whose Right to Cast Ballot Has Been Assailed by the HighMcGinnis-Irwin Coalition Retain Attorneys and Will Fight Case Hard.

Of the 21 men whose right to vote in the First ward has been attacked by the High-McGinnis-Irwin coalition, 19 voted in the First ward in 1909 and have been residents of the district from two to 15 years. All of them have retained counsel and will fight the case preceding instituted before the county commissioners, the hearing for which will be held next Thursday morning in Uniontown. Attorneys F. E. Younkin, Fred D. Munson, H. George May, J. Kirk Renner, S. R. Goldsmith, John P. Keppert and John Dugan, Jr., have been engaged by one or more of these men to resist the efforts of the Barefoot Boys to deprive them of their legal right to exercise their suffrage.

Two of the men whose right to vote have been attacked live in the First ward. One is M. J. Sullivan, Mr. Sullivan has lived in the ward for eight years. He is employed as an electrician by the Baltimore & Ohio railroad and is the father of two married sons, both of whom are registered voters in the city. They are telegraph operators. Another is Joseph Grey, for 15 years a resident of the First ward. He is a sales agent by occupation. Two of his sons are particularly well known, one being Timekeeper J. E. Grey of the West Penn conductor. The other is Jerry Grey, a West Penn conductor. He has other children living in the city. Both of these men have voted regularly in the First ward during the time they have lived within its limits, and so far as known, neither has ever been challenged at the polls.

Among the colored voters whose right to be attacked are some elderly residents of the ward. The Democrats are drawing the color line in the campaign. Probably influenced by the domination of the southern states in Congress, they are seeking to bar the negro from exercising his right of franchise. The following is the list of First ward colored residents whose right to vote has been attacked, and their occupation.

Thomas Banks, Baltimore & Ohio freight house; Fred Banks, cook at the West Side Hotel; Robert Douglass and James Carter, laborers; Charles Dinsmore, a driver for J. L. Stader's grocery; James Elam, a laborer; John Jackson, a shirt man; William Jackson, a waiter; William Johnson, an employee of the U.S. preserving plant at Adair's Hill; quantity of clothing scattered about and other evidence of the presence of intruders. The children's bank belonged to the two grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Everett, they having been left downstairs in order that their contents might be taken to a bank vault. A silver purse containing $9.25 was taken from the pocket of a coat belonging to Miss Sarah Everett.

Nothing else was disturbed, but fearing that they might be surprised the robbers had unlocked all of the doors so that they might get away as quickly as possible.

PLAN MUMMERS' PARADE

West Side Volunteers Offer to Run Halloween Festivities.

In order that Connellsville may have a big Halloween celebration this year, the West Side volunteers department will be organized to conduct a mummery and other festivities in connection with their annual mummery ball.

A meeting was held at the Polk Marion meeting hall in the evening, with Dr. J. E. Davis, Mr. J. E. Jones and Mr. E. McDonald, all of whom are registered voters in the city, present.

The company has also volunteered the service of all its members as guards to be stationed along the line of parade to keep the crowd back, prevent disorder, and see that there is no danger of fire. A committee composed of less Cypher, J. M. Eadcock, Charles Rowe and Irwin Shumaker.

Last year the celebration was confined to a parade of school children and a general jollification on the high school grounds. The usual distribution of candies and apples, however, will likely be feature of this year's observance.

THINK HARD

It Pays to Think About Food.

The inimitable life—some people eat often, others hardly and others illustrate to the experience of this body.

"At my four years ago I suffered greatly from indigestion, always having eaten whatever I liked, not thinking of the results of the food I ate. This induced me to go to the doctor of the day, Dr. John G. Smith, who advised me to eat only what I could digest, with the result of great improvement of my health and strength."

"I became ashamed and tried dieting, won my battles very easily, and used other remedies, but found no relief."

"Because of the virtues of Grape Nuts and Postum, I commenced using them in place of my usual breakfast of coffee, bacon and biscuits, and at my first time I was relieved of stomach and other ills attending indigestion. In a month time my health was performing its functions naturally and I could eat a hearty and filling meal without any difficulty."

"I gained ten pounds in this short time, and am now in the clear and in robust, recovered my health and strength. I continue to use Grape Nuts in Postum for breakfast, now my good health speaks to their use."

"I like the delicious flavor of Grape Nuts, especially in Postum. Postum is so strong it tastes like coffee." Name of the Postum Co., Little Creek, Mo.

The most popular food in the world is Grape-Nuts. It costs 19¢ a box. "There's a reason."

"Look in place for the little boxes, 10¢ each to Westcott."

"Ever eat the above letter? A few new appears to me to time. They are genuine, true and full of human interest."—Adv.

WHAT DYSPÉPTICS SHOULD EAT

A PHYSICIAN'S ADVICE:

"Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble are nine times out of ten due to acidity; therefore stomach sufferers should, whenever possible, avoid eating food that is cold in its nature or which by chemical action in the stomach develops acidity. Unfortunately, such a rule eliminates most foods which are pleasant to the taste as well as those which are rich in blood, flesh and nerve building properties. This is the reason why dyspeptics and stomach sufferers are usually so thin, emaciated and ticklish in their vital energy which can only come from a well fed body. For the benefit of those sufferers who have been obliged to exclude from their diet all starches, meat or fatty food, and are living to keep up an unbearable craving for glutinous products, I would suggest that you should try to add dry food or foods which are more likely to moderate an acid, taking however only after this a teaspoonful of blanched mace size in a little hot or cold water. This will neutralize any acid which may be present or which may be formed, and instead of the usual feeling of uneasiness and fullness, you will perfect your food regimen with you perfect your food corrective and antidote known. It has no direct action on the stomach, but by neutralizing the acidity of the food contents, and thus removing the source of the irritation which influences the body's stomach lining, it does more than could possibly be done by any drug or medicine. As a physician, I believe in the use of medicine whenever necessary, but I must admit that I cannot see the cause of disease an inflamed and irritated stomach with drugs instead of getting rid of the underlying cause of all the trouble. Get a little bisected magnesia from your druggist and take some of the bisected magnesia as directed above, and see if I am not right." —Adv.

FRIDAY EVENING, OCT. 16, 1914.

DON'T BE FOOLED.

The Unontown Standard, organ of the Democratic syndicate which controls the Federal patronage and coincidentally the Democratic party of Fayette county, more or less ably assisted by President Huber's personal organ, the Connellsville News, is striving desperately against a situation which speaks for itself. A few days ago, it put forth the following characteristic blurb:

"The News Standard is advised by Republicans that more pessimistic news is to be disseminated this week, the middle of October being considered the psychological time to spread it. The election day is only three weeks off. Don't be fooled by it. The trusts and the railroads can't keep the country down much longer. Let their political agents hurt business by their reports if they want to. Let them hurt the workman by their shutdowns and wage reductions. If they want to. They can do these things, no matter who is in power."

Now, the people won't be fooled by anybody's campaign lies, much less by such absurd inventions as the above. The managers of the trusts and the railroads are the last persons in the world to want to "keep the country down" for the very excellent and sufficient reason that in this process the country always sits heavily upon the chest of business and industry, which includes the trusts and the railroads.

Furthermore, it is a fact well enough known not to admit of argument that employers of labor have curtailed production with great reluctance; that they have clung to their employees as long as possible and, finally, that wage reductions have been rare, employers striving earnestly to avoid this contingency because of the increased cost of living.

It will be remembered that the Democratic party pledged itself to reduce the cost of living by the simple process of reducing the Tariff. To the consternation of the Democratic theorists, but in line with the prophecies of the Republicans, it worked the other way. THE LOW TARIFF MADE HIGHER LIVING; THE HIGH TARIFF FORED REVENUE AND MADE NECESSARY A WAR TAX OF ONE DOLLAR PER HEAD ON EVERY MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD IN THE COUNTRY TO MEET THE EXTRAVAGANCES OF AN ADMINISTRATION PLDED TO EXPEND-

SOMEWHAT PERSONAL.

The Democratic slogan in Fayette county is reduced to rather desperate straits when the Democratic campaign managers feel compelled to abandon their old stand and make a number of fabrications, some mostly funny and others foul with slander.

The editor of The Courier is not a candidate for anything, and the fabrications of the past few days to discredit him personally can only be explained on the hypothesis that his editorial comments are getting under somebody's skin.

It is not necessary to notice everything that has been said about the editor of The Courier, but it is proper to repeat that this charge, reiterated yesterday by the Connellsville News, that the editor opposed the nomination of Robert E. Roosevelt as a candidate for Congress on the ground that he was a damned shouting Methodist, is utterly devoid of truth.

Furthermore, to change the New York edition of this statement.

Nothing is true as stated in The News that the editor of The Courier owns two distilleries in Fayette county. He owns small interests in two distilleries, which came to him recently through the death of a relative. There has never been any attempt on his part to conceal the fact, and he is prepared to shoulder all the responsibility in connection therewith.

Sterling and Higher have always been the attorneys for these distilleries, but we assume that a fact has no more connection with the present campaign than has the present ownership of the distilleries.

South Connellsville needs police as well as fire protection.

COMING BACK.

It was too much to expect that the unnatural alliance between William Penn and Richard, Jr., Quay would long endure. It will be remembered that Penn honored Quay's father to his death. "Dick" Quay has been a Progressive, but he has mollified Colonel Roosevelt, that he cannot follow the lead of Penn any further because Penn has ditched the Progressive party of Pennsylvania by making it a mere Democratic annex.

Generally speaking the men who left the Republican party in 1912 to support the candidacy of Theodore Roosevelt for President still adhere in the main to Republican principles and especially to Republican views on the Tariff question. This question now chiefly concerns Pennsylvania and in fact American industry everywhere.

The Pennsylvania Republicans who have been acting with the Washington party organization feel that it is time for them to drop personal considerations and return to the rescue of vital political principles and the restoration of as much as may be of the Tariff policy which has always made Pennsylvania and the nation great and prosperous.

In the prophetic language of Editor Allen Cooper, "Boys, they're comin' back."

MEDICAL INSPECTION.

The medical inspection of the Connellsville public schools is carried on more thorough and efficient basis than ever.

The directors and the physicians have arrived at a better understanding among themselves, and the work will be done during the year with greater public spirit and more professional interest than last year.

A more practical improvement will be the standardization of the examinations. This is more important than it may appear on first consideration.

The medical examination of the pupils has been a work of advancement, of uplift, of humanity, of public spirit.

It was charged last year that some physicians added to their practice through their activities as medical examiners.

If so, it only shows that virtue sometimes gets something for its reward beside an unavailing conscience.

When the Unontown New Freedom Standard prints its Tariff arguments with the statement that the present industrial depression is due to a conspiracy between the Pennsylvania manufacturers and the railroads to elect Robert LaFollette to the United States Senate, it is hardly worth while to argue any further. Such an absurd invention stamp all its interlocutors on the subject as trifling and unworthy. Business is just as bad in other states where Penrose is not running. That the Democratic Tariff is responsible for our industrial condition is susceptible of proof.

Because Frank Stepling urged the candidacy of Morgan Bertram in the first instance, the Democrats must not assume that everybody else is given to bad language.

The Homestead A. Mitchell Palmer says Senator William E. Crow is a "plain bairn." This reminds us of Colonel "Pete" Shampard's classification which included the Plain Liars, the Tamler and the Expert. Looks as if Palmer and some of his Democratic colleagues would have to be classified with the higher-ups.

The Democratic party is in power through accident and it looks as if its Fayette county organs hoped to keep it there by inactivity.

The Unontown Standard makes fun of the Unontown Herald's Tariff arguments and then proceeds to shroud the question from its own viewpoint. The Herald's presentation of the matter was a model of clarity, while the exposition of The Standard is as timid as the Mississippi rolling flood. The Herald dares to present the facts and The Standard aims to conceal them.

Stewart Township reports Squid Winter and the Indians at the county seat are on the war path.

The Democratic papers have been daring Penrose and Crow to speak in Fayette county and they are not very much annoyed that the chips have been unceremoniously knocked from their shoulders. That isn't the only knock they are going to get, either.

The trade papers report the steel trade outlook bad, but of course they are not Democratic authority.

The Connellsville News reports Chairman Crow as saying, "They've got no going." This is another lie out of the whole cloth. The going is in the other direction. It's the Democrats who are on the run in this campaign.

The Panama Canal is on the slide.

Senator Penrose awakened 'em up in Washington. If he comes out to Fayette county he will doubtless have something interesting to say.

The inquiring Connellsville News wants to know if Senator Crow in his rage forced the adjournment of the legislature, and they just made mad." Say, but some of the would-be bottled gods who have succeeded in making Senator Crow mad are in danger of being destroyed themselves.

The Bradford organ of Fayette county have given over trying to deny the existence of the dull times and are attempting to explain them.

The European war has created a demand for American horses. After this political campaign is over, perhaps some of the Democratic war horses may be had cheap.

Palmer has the permission of the public to suspend his 57-count indictment of Penrose long enough to explain that little 12-count indictment of Chairman Crow.

Bane and Enchire.

A beach dance and enchire will be held Monday evening in the parochial school.

SCOTTDALE

Special to The Courier.
SCOTTDALE, October 16.—The equal suffrage movement will be given a start in this community on Wednesday afternoon, when Mrs. Beatrice Foster Robertson, wife, will speak at the Odd P. Club Hall. In the Father & Graft building at 3:30 o'clock. Foster's coming is but an indication that it is now expected that the part of the women in town who are interested in the subject, Mrs. Hale is being seen here by the Greenbush Suffragettes in their short dresses. In the Greenbush Young Men's Christian Association hall on Wednesday evening. At the meeting in this place the speaker will be introduced by Rev. J. E. Hutchinson, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church. Mrs. Hale is a former well-known actress, a brilliant cultured and clever player of Shakespearean roles, often being opposite her talented uncle, Sir Johnston Forbes Robertson. Since her marriage she has lectured on the drama, poetry and woman suffrage. It is predicted that she will never a large audience present, for both men and women are invited, and whether or not they favor the movement, but are assured of entertainment and instruction.

SUNDAY MEETING.

The Sunday afternoon meeting for men of the Young Men's Christian Association building at 3 o'clock will have for the speaker on Sunday a guest, Mr. C. F. Rank, pastor of the United Methodist Church, and one who during his term in Harrisburg was particularly sympathetic with those who are often called upon to address the men in the field.

CLASS PARTY.

The Johnnies of the Scottdale High School will hold a party this evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hill of Grove street. Miss Louise Hill being a member of that class, quite a time has been planned by the young people.

TAU GANETTE.

The Scottdale high school football team which spent last Saturday afternoon at the field of Connellsville and brought home the bacon will go to Jeannette this Saturday to compete with the Glass City bunch of football artists of that high school. Jeannette has the reputation of being very wary and having some tricks of the forward pass that are difficult to defend. The Johnnies are the die-hard apostles of the pick-up will be to watch their comings. A good delegation of boosters will accompany the boys and the party will probably leave Scottdale on the 11 o'clock street car. Incidentally a number of others will attend as spectators meeting in Greenbush today, and will probably have their dinners or further entertainments.

MANY HURDLES.

The annual sale of tickets for the Young Men's Christian Association lecture and lecture course, due to start as usual this year, has brought in a good many responses promising that the ticket office will be enough to meet the extra demand, so that the number of tickets will exceed the number of seats in the auditorium. The cost is one of eight dollars for men for only $1.50. The next sale is for the women, will men, at the presentation building at 6:30 on Monday morning. Those coming being given numbers untiling them to place in seating reservations. No price is derived from the course and all money received goes into the scouring of cutlery. The best attraction will be the illustrated lecture on the Panama Canal on Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. This is by Dr. Virgil Palmer and is claimed to be the best one on this subject on the platform.

MRS. STANLEY SWEENEY.

The funeral of Mrs. Stanley Sweeney, one of the earliest residents in Connelville, who died of peritonitis, took place from St. Joseph's Church, with burial in that cemetery yesterday morning. The deceased leaves a husband and a number of children.

PRO CONNAH LABOR.

A large number of local people have planned to go to Connellsville this evening to see "Everywoman" played at the Colonial Theatre.

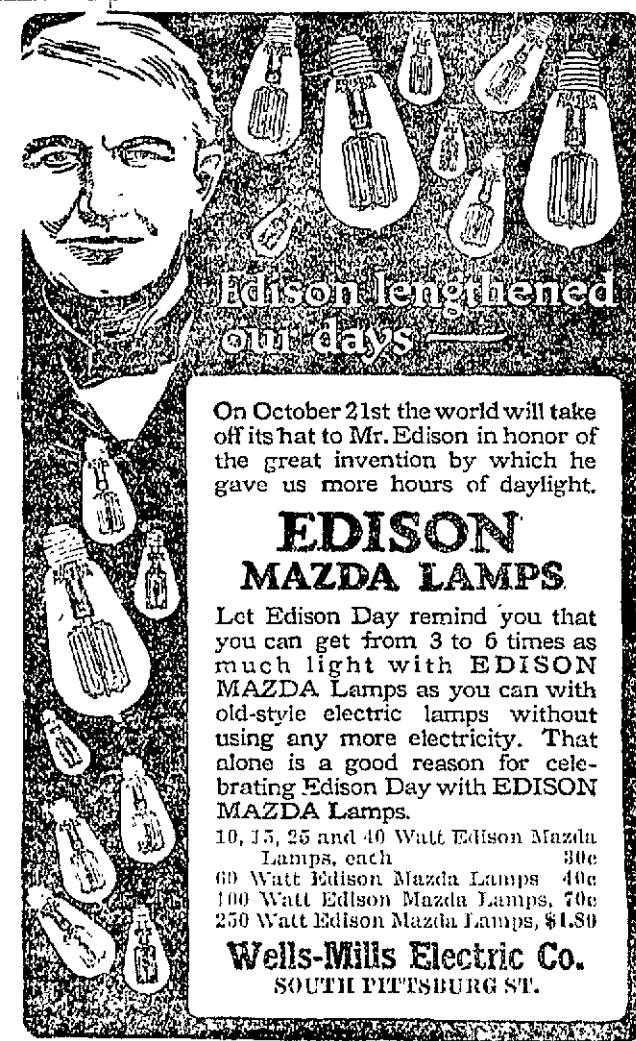

ON THE WEIRD LINE.

Mrs. Anna Miller of Scottdale and Lorry Whipple of Town, were quietly married Wednesday at St. John's Baptist Roman Catholic Church, Rev. Father Lemire officiating. The bride wore a blue traveling suit and a black velvet hat with a smart feather trimming. Following the ceremony was a well-attended wedding breakfast which covered for only the immediate members of the family were here. Mr. and Mrs. Whipple left in the afternoon for Superior, La. to reside.

That's the Way You Use Hyoem, the Safe Cough Remedy.

The most pleasant, easiest, harmless, and the really sensible method for the cure of croupy or Hoem, which can be had from any drug store. Just put twenty drops of the liquid in the small bottle that comes with every bottle. Then breathe it in. A few minutes' use always instantly relieves the head and stops that annoying sniffing.

When using Hoem every particle of air that enters the breathing organs is charged with an antiseptic healing balsom that destroys the offending germs, stops the unclean discharge from the nose, relieves the irritation and quickly heals the sore and inflamed tissues. The first day's use of Hoem will show a decided improvement no matter how distressing the trouble.

Hoem, which usually begins with a protracted cold, often becomes a very serious ailment, so don't wait but start using Hoem today—it is inexpensive and A. A. Clarke always sells it on the "No-cure-no-pay" plan.—Adv.

How Mr. Peple Found Material for "A Pair of Sixes."

How would you like to be the sweetheart of a young man who is a half partner in a perfectly healthy and successful business and then visit his partner's wife to find that your fiance was employed there as a butler?

Or, how would you like to be the wife of a young man who owns the other half of that same business, and find that because he has won in game of cards he must conduct the entire business, which demands so much of his time that he is unable to be at home more than one or two evenings each week?

Or, how would you like to be the stenographer in the office of the same firm, comprising the same two young men, and have to resign your position because each one says he is the senior partner and each one will discharge you if you show preference for the other, and you do not know how to please them?

These are the problems which the trinity of attractive young femininity has to face in "A Pair of Sixes," the new farce by Edward Peple, with companies now playing at the Long Acre Theatre, New York, Cort Theatre, Chicago, London, England and Australia. That they are problems taken from life which various young women have faced at various times, is vouchsed for by the author, and therefore must needs lend human interest to the idea of this new theatrical offering. For according to Mr. Peple the idea of this play has been generating in his mind ever since he first began to think of the theatre as a means of livelihood, and that was before he wrote "The Prince Chap."

It began at Richmond, Va., his home, where two young men of his acquaintance were engaged in the conduct of a successful business, but were unable to get along. Their first quarrel occurred when the question of prior claim to the one stenographer's services arose, and that is an amusing episode in the first act of Mr. Peple's play. They quarreled over that, and the young woman resigned. Their quarrel, as in "A Pair of Sixes" grew to such proportions that they decided to dissolve, but when the time came for dissolution neither one was willing to sell his interest to the other. That is another episode in the development of Mr. Peple's play. Then the playwright's imagination was brought into play for means to solve the problem for the partners (in his play) and lay the foundation for a good story. So he introduced a lawyer—in this case the prototype of a prominent attorney of Richmond. The lawyer was unable to unravel the complication so he dropped his work for the day, and after dinner visited his club for a quiet game of draw poker. In the midst of the game, the idea came. Why not have the two partners agree to play a hand of show-down, the holder of the high hand to conduct the business unassisted by the other; the loser to share in the profits or losses, as the case might be, and abide by all contracts, sales and other decisions made by the partner in charge? The lawyer forthwith drafted a legal form for the agree-

THE VALLEY OF THE MOON. An intense six-part drama, "The Valley of the Moon," will be presented at the Solsom Theatre tomorrow. It is one of the best plays by the celebrated writer Jack London, and will be a most interesting picture. A two-act comedy, "With the Stage of the Desert Glass Gold," is a strong feature. "The White Wolf" is an exciting Indian drama. The Jester comedy, "The New Butler," is one long laugh. Tonight, "The Trey o' Hearts" will be presented, and Monday the greatest comedy of the season, "A Pair of Sixes."

A PAIR OF SIXES. Which drew full houses of laughter at the Longacre Theatre, New York City, for nearly a year, is to be presented by H. H. Frazee at the Solsom Theatre for one performance only, Monday night, October 19. H. H. Frazee, producer of many successes, has in "A Pair of Sixes" the funniest comedy in New York for the past year, and the greatest success. Mr. Frazee has never yet had a failure. "A Pair of Sixes" is without doubt something entirely different in farce, for it tells a logical story, without resorting to slap stick methods and the action as well as the dialogue is thoughtfully worked out, so that the plot is cumulative and excites continued interest until the drop of the final curtain. Those who have held sixes and failed to fill them and those who do not know one card from another will be equally nimbed at the ludicrous situations arising from the use of the ubiquitous sixes. Those who have partnership troubles will turn over a new leaf and decide to act like a human being for the sake of their business. You will surely lose your grouch while watching the effect of other people's grumbles.

All For His Country

A Story of War With Japan

By J. U. GIESY

Off beyond was a dark wall of orange and shade trees, thicket of his father's planting. Among them squat the house of red stone which that same father had built—his own home for twenty years—the only vesting of life he had known as he grew to manhood. Farther beyond it all a long, low structure met his eyes—the laboratory building.

Little creatures which he knew to be cattle and horses moved slowly across the green expanse as he noted. The cool of the pines struck up to his eye and beckoned him to it from the tent through which he had ridden.

He clucked to his horses and urged them down the trail from the lip of the plateau. And so Meade Stillman came home.

The purple of evening was creeping into the valley as he rode up to the house of red sandstone and slipped from the saddle. A figure appeared in the doorway, gazed in surprised regard at the unexpected arrival, uttered a cry and apprehended.

"Meade, my son! Back so soon?" cried Stillman and seized the hand of the one who had returned.

Meade nodded. "Back again, dad, and glad to get here," he said quickly. "You're well!"

"Oh, yes," replied his father, putting aside the question. "But you? What brings you back?"

"I was through with my mission," said Meade.

His father lifted his eyes and gazed full into those of his son. "They accepted it so soon?" he faltered. "It is an accomplished thing?"

Meade held a choking grip rise in his throat before that vibrant appeal. Words failed him. He dropped his eyes from the ones which questioned and shook his head.

"No!" Stillman senior bowed his head also.

CHAPTER VII.

No Labor Goes For War.

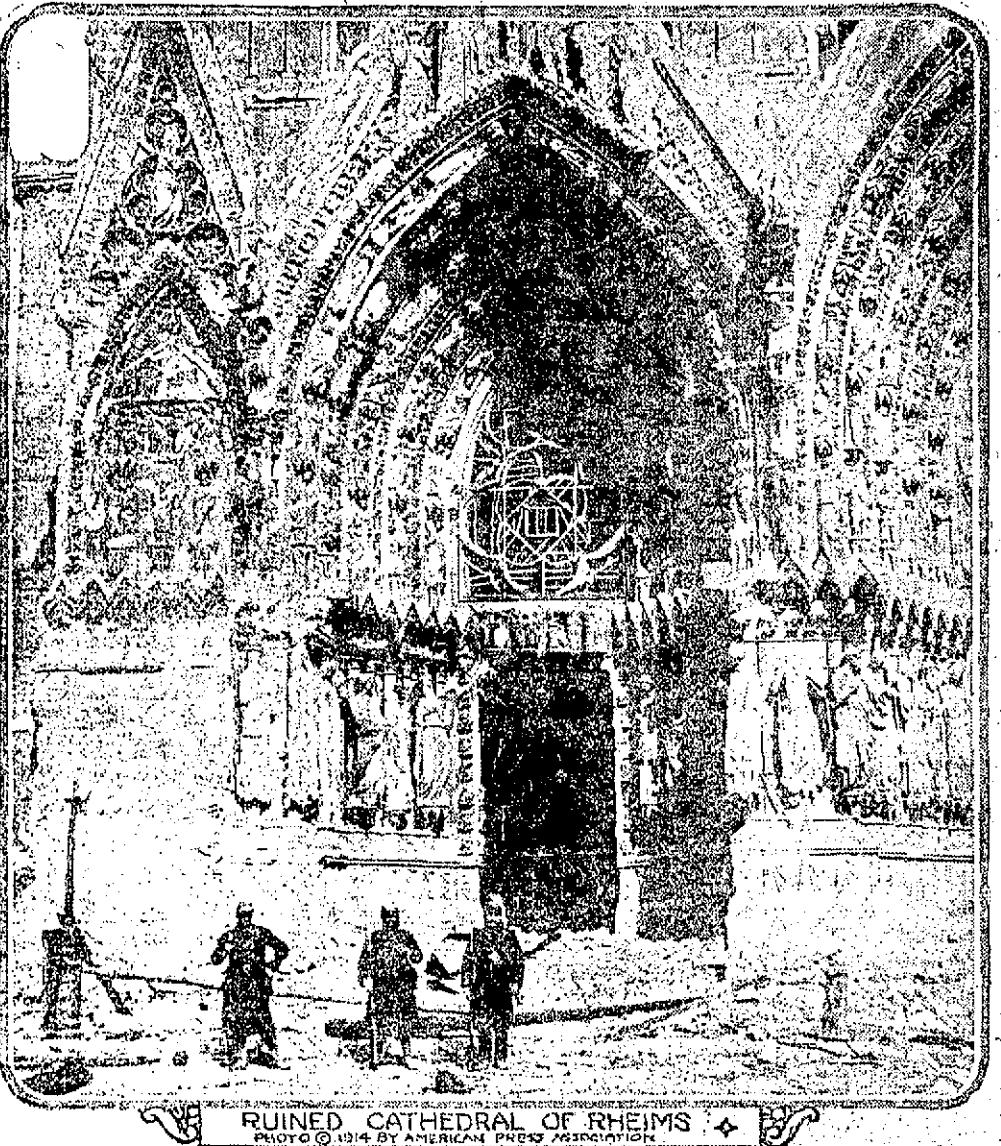

THIS isn't a great deal to tell," Meade began. "I went to Washington. I wired Colonel Gottheil from Chicago. He gave me an laudable bearing. Both he and Captain Mousel of the aviation corps were greatly taken with the destroyer and pronounced it practical. But there was a man named Gotz—a sort of political boss and a member of congress, as well as the man who holds the government contracts for their aeroplanes, who spoiled our plans."

"He raised an objection to the cost of the planes. That, however, was only an excuse, I am sure. His real reason was that he knew it meant the loss of his contracts, and against that the country's welfare could go along. Well, he killed it. That's all, dad. You told me not to tell generally about our pitiful deposits, and I mentioned it only to Gottheil. Maybe it'd told the rest? I might have made a difference, but I doubt it. Gotz didn't dare let the ship go through. We were beaten for the benefit of his machine. So I came home."

Stillman senior nodded. "I knew him years ago. He hasn't changed, I guess. Well, never mind it, boy. Put up the horses and come in. Supper is being prepared. Anyhow, some time they'll need us and send to me for the men they refused. No labor goes for war in this world. The time was not ripe. I allowed my wishes to make my prevarication."

Meade unshouldered and turned his horse into the pasture, went in and sat at the table. Spring Water, a Navajo squaw, and her daughter, served the supper and without any sign he slipped back into the rut of the old existence and took up the routine of years. The desert which clung him once more folded him in its embrace in the same old fashion. Everything was the same.

The next night he sat down and wrote a letter. It was the second of its kind he had ever written. And he lost a day and a night and a second day while he rode down to mail that missive to a woman.

But he was young, and he was human. So he took it, and mailed it at 1 P.M.

On Aug. 19 a column of Mexican federal troops crossed the international boundary and fell upon the United States forces patrolling the border.

While not entirely unexpected, yet the suddenness of the movement when it came enabled the Mexicans to deliver a defeat upon the force which they attacked. The first stroke was delivered from Naco in the state of Sonora, and within twenty-four hours an engagement was precipitated by another column, that opened fire upon the American patrol east of El Paso, near the little town of Guadalupe on the Mexican side.

The government at Washington, which had up to now maintained a position of neutrality in the Mexican situation, immediately demanded an explanation. Secretary of State Ryerson forwarded his message in somewhat dramatic language; for even his public nature was altered by the apparently unpredictable action. The Mexican reply was that the federal troops had acted upon orders from the City of Mexico.

The government at Washington, which had up to now maintained a position of neutrality in the Mexican situation, immediately demanded an explanation. Secretary of State Ryerson forwarded his message in somewhat dramatic language; for even his public nature was altered by the apparently unpredictable action. The Mexican reply was that the federal troops had acted upon orders from the City of Mexico.

Thereupon the Mexican minister was handed his passport and the American people woke up to the fact that they had a war on their hands.

The movement of the United States troops was marked by a rapidity of action which resulted in throwing 50,000 armed men into the field inside the last week. In the meanwhile General Carron fought two drawn battles and returned safely on the line of his advancing re-enforcements.

He at least succeeded in holding the Mexican gain a tinge of feet rather than miles from day to day and handled his small force in a masterly manner.

With the arrival of the fresh forces the American army assumed the offensive and delivered a crushing check to their foes near the town of Kent, in Texas.

Thereafter the war took on a steady character of American advance and Mexican retreat.

From the seat of hostilities Colonel Gotz wrote several letters to Bernice, describing the actions and the part played by the aviation corps. The letters were proof of incalculable service after the border was reached in the capacity of scouts in advance of the American columns.

In the meantime the American fleet had completely invested the port of Vera Cruz and finally landed a heavy force and was threatening an advance upon Mexico City. Despite all of which the southern country, plainly defended, continued to fight it steadily losing strength, without any indication of peace.

So far Bernice had had no word from Carron. The man had apparently dropped out of sight. When an invitation came from her father's sister in New York to come up for the opera season in October she asked him permission and wrote to accept.

On the 2d, just before she left, for New York, Bernice received another letter from Gotz. After describing the local situation as "quiet" he went on to say:

"They apparently do not need me here any longer. I received orders an hour ago to proceed to San Francisco and take charge of the equipment of a couple of aeroplanes which are being held at the Mare Island yard. Leave here tomorrow. Will write you from France."

Bernice Gottheil went to New York on the 3d of October with a light heart and the expectation of an enjoyable time.

And yet several things had happened even before that time, and occurred immediately after, which might have pointed the results to follow, or so it seems in the light of retrospect.

For instance, in the latter part of August a portion of the Japanese fleet sailed on a practice cruise, with the avowed intention of calling at various European ports.

They stopped at Manila, were diplomatically entertained and departed westward. They were afterward reported from Bombay, Suez and various Mediterranean ports and passed through Oct. 2.

On the 3d of October a large vessel, chartered for the purpose, sailed from Vancouver, Jammed with 2,000 Japanese sailors from various points in British Columbia. This vessel cleared for the Hawaiian Islands, and its departure was recorded by a paragraph in the papers, covering some scant lines.

On the morning of the 4th of October the Japanese government officially notified the United States that its fleet would call at various ports and expect the slaughtered bodies of men, women and children in their wake.

The police and firemen fought to stem the tide rolling westward.

Dozens of the underworld, night owls of the city, citizens awakened by the conflict, joined them and fought shoulder to shoulder. Yet the silent eyes moved forward. The firemen moved forward. The police and firemen had been warned and instructed in advance for that moment.

They were casting not only their own lives, but those of thousands of their countrymen, on the fall of the dice this night. Many died, but the rest went onward the north and west. It was estimated broadly that morning saw more than 6,000 men gathered within the limits of the Presidio reservation.

Meanwhile Stuart finished his transcription of Jackson's story, gathered up the sheets and took them to the editor's room, where the editor's head lay upon the blood stained sheet of paper. His cry brought the others crowding in about the desk where the dead man sat.

By right of priority Stuart lifted the head gently and removed the written caption. The pencil layed in the dead man's fingers rattled faintly upon the desk.

Stuart held up the page to the wide eyes of the others. "Spent bullet from the window," he said shortly. "He had just finished this. Well, here goes!"

He wrapped the life dampened sheet about his handful of copy and jammed all into a pneumatic tube.

"We'll get out the paper. It was what he wanted," he said. "And wait a minute, follows. I wonder if anybody tried to get in touch with the outer towns. I guess this bug is grabbed, but how about the others?" He lifted a receiver from a telephone hook and waited until a scared voice answered his signal.

"Get me Long Distance," he directed. "We've got to get them back." he growled with savage avowal. "We can attack them from the land with our marines and what men in the city will volunteer to follow, and there'll be a lot. We can attack after the fleet has engaged from the water."

He whistled on Jackson and Stuart.

"Will one or both of you return and bear a message from me to the mayor, asking him to call for volunteers, and in his inability to communicate with the governor of this state to request the national guardmen in the city to act in conjunction with our marines? And, gentlemen—to the ship's officers

"return to your vessels and be ready to move as soon as the scout returns."

Quite gravely the men about the room inclined their heads. The challenge of the sentry at the door broke the quiet. Instantly a man's voice was heard shouting the name of Gotz.

of the people intrusted to your care we demand instant and unconditional surrender.

THE SAILORS,
Commanding Forces at Presidio Fort.

"Gentlemen, 500,000 lives depend upon our answer," he began and choked. "God knows what it means to advise it, but I see nothing for us save compliance. As you know, we are cut off from all outside communication by rail, by wire or boat. In the name of humanity, what can we do but submit and await for the nation to which we belong to deliver the final answer?"

As Stuart and Jackson preferred their request for an interview with Commandant Raymond in an airplane darted up with a racing motor, rising from the navy yard grounds and gliding off to the south and west, an air scout going forth to feel the position in advance of the warships, waiting orders to sail. A moment found them in the presence of the assembled officers of the several vessels and Raymond spoke at once. "What word do you bring?"

"The Japs held the Presidio. They beached a schooner full of their men and rushed the garrison in the dark.

A lot of Japs from the city have joined them. Oakland was burning as we came up, and all the wires are down on our side."

"The story will be confirmed or disproved soon now," said Colonel Gotz, who was present. "One of our men just started on a scout flight by my orders. When he returns we will know about the forts."

Raymond brought a fist down upon his desk.

"We've got to get them back," he growled with savage avowal. "We can marines and what men in the city will

"I can't. The line's not working," said the voice at the other end.

"Berkley, then—San Jose, Encinament?" snapped Stuart.

"I can't," said the invisible girl.

"There's something wrong."

"You bet there is," growled the man.

"Aren't any of your trunks in order, Central?"

"No, sir. They seem to be out or down—or—something."

"All right," said Stuart less sharply.

"Be a good girl and buck up. Stick to your board and don't get scared."

He hung up and turned to his fellows.

"We're cut off completely. They're done one good job. I thought it was funny we'd had no bother with calls since this happened. Wonder what the devil's wrong that the ship at Mare

Island don't get busy? If I had a motor

I'd go up and out."

"Might pick up one at Lynch's wharf," suggested one of the men beside him. "That is if they haven't been picked up already."

Stuart nodded. "I'll try it. Who's going to go along?"

"Me," said Jackson, who had made his way in with the rest.

"Come on, then."

Stuart rose. They made their way down to the street, now deserted of all save the dead and wounded around the fountain, and set off along Market toward the waterfront. In front of the ruined and smoldering ferry building they turned south and made their way to the wharf, where boats and launches were kept for rental.

By good fortune they found a motor boat bobbing idly at the landing, and bashedly let themselves down into its pit.

As the launch backed out and turned clear of the pier heads they both cried aloud.

For the first time they had a clear view of the Oakland side of the bay, and they both marked the lurid light of fires, stretching far above that side.

"Oakland, too," gasped Jackson.
